

G-UNITY SCHOLARSHIP RECIPIENT

JOSHUA DAVIS

“I am so grateful that the G-UNITY Foundation has taken a chance on me. For me, attending college would have been impossible without this scholarship!”

Joshua had an early interest in writing and was a prizewinner in a Disney essay contest. However, soon his interest was piqued in a different direction while attending the Business Magnet High School. Participating in the Finance and Scholastic Training (FAST) Track program once a month at the Bloomberg offices in Manhattan, Joshua became involved with computers. Later, while working with the Virtual Enterprise program at his high school, he learned about the processes that companies use to make financial decisions about what technologies to choose for their businesses.

“I want to be able to merge my writing skills and my computer skills into a career path. Every business depends on computers today. The G-UNITY scholarship has given me this springboard and I’m going to take advantage of it.”

Following in his sister’s footsteps, Joshua’s next stop after Queensborough will be Queens College where he’ll pursue a bachelor’s degree in computer programming. Then will it be Wall Street or Madison Avenue? We’ll have to wait and see what the future holds for Joshua Davis . . .
